

THERE IS A BIRD

by Amy Sabir

There is a bird in a tree
Staring out at the sea
The bird has brown feathers
And tiny eyes
Eyes like you and me

In the sea there is a fish
Swimming in the water
Yellow, orange and green scales covering it
When it goes to the surface
It sees the beach in front of it with the bright yellow sand

On the beach there is a crab
Scuttling along
It's walking sideways, claws waving to and fro
Hard shells soft bodies
It can see a meadow

In the meadow there is there is a butterfly
Flapping its wings gently
It is plain white and flapping around the yew tree
One the yew tree it can see a squirrel clutching an acorn
On the tree there is a squirrel climbing all about
Searching for acorns and nuts and seeds to bury underground
The squirrel can see a pony trotting about the field

There is a pony in a field galloping all around
Its long brown mane is blowing in the wind and its hooves are making a banging sound
It has soft brown fur, very beautiful
And that pony over there can see ...

... you

We must all protect the animals: the birds, the fish, the crabs, the butterflies, the squirrels, the ponies and many more
So we must all protect the world: everyone start doing this today
